GRASS WIDOWS.

Widows are dangerous to men's peace of mind, grass-widows doubly so, and they abound in men's offices. Occasionally, a man is caught by a typist who is really a girl and woman. She means to drag him down, and she succeeds. In other cases, blackmail is the object. The man is deliberately tempted, falls, and endures all the horrors of blackmail until at last he commits murder by suicide, or blows, leaving a wretched home behind him. It would not be fair to represent the lady-typist as always the temptress, innocent or deliberate. There are base employers who deliberately set out to ruin girls in their employ, and the girl, tempted of losing her employment, has to commit suicide. Still, the professional and business class of charming, intelligent and dangerously attractive, unscrupulously married women and grass-widows keeps Cupid and the lawyer busy busy. And now and then the lady-typist, directly or indirectly adds to the list of domestic murders.

Among the incunabula explored was one which marked the site of the smelting works of Memphis, mostly of Roman times. From these came, for example, fishbed and unfishbed; the famous blue glazeware. Here also are some crucibles, used for smelting iron ore, which show that the ore was brought to Memphis and not smelted at the mines. One curious object is a stone 'cream pillow' from the temple of Hath, with a little pillow cut in the centre, in which, no doubt, a figure of the god was placed, to influence the dreams of the seer. There is much to interest the archaeologist in the exhibition, and no student of Egyptology should neglect to visit it.

A HABEAS CORPUS CASE.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

In the Supreme Court this morning, the Chief Justice, Sir Francis Pigott, delivered the following judgment in the case in which Mr. Eiden Potter applied for a writ habeas corpus to be made absolute in the case of Li Yu Mei, a prisoner at Victoria Gaol:—

I quite admit the force of Mr. Potter's argument that the practice now definitely established by R. v. Zoung that the defendant may give evidence in defence before the Magistrate does make the interpretation of Bigham J's judgment in re Shill extremely difficult, because the two statements in it, that you cannot say "there is evidence one way and evidence the other way," and that yet you can say there is "no evidence" have to be reconciled. I am not prepared at present to express an opinion on this question, because I am clear that if I am to hold that there is no evidence, in the sense in which I am asked to do in this case, that is to say, no evidence worthy of the name, I can only do so by balancing the evidence or weighing the evidence, and so interfering with the exercise of the Magistrate's judicial discretion, and this is just what I cannot do. I am also asked to hold on the authority of certain English cases that the Court cannot take judicial cognizance of the fact that Shanghai is in the Empire of China, and that there is no evidence of this essential fact. None of these cases are extradition cases, in which the question would naturally frequently arise. But whatever the old cases decide, I cannot hold that this Court in interpreting a treaty with China can say we know nothing of its Ports which have been declared Treaty Ports. I am of opinion that the fact which one Contracting State must give to the statements of the other Contracting State warrants the presumption that the place where the crime is alleged to have been committed comes within the territory of the other Party to the treaty, so far as locality is concerned, and that this throws the burden on the prisoner to prove the contrary. The rule must therefore be discharged. I must now give a definite ruling as to the locus standi of the Chinese Government in habeas corpus proceedings before the Court. The first case I cited when I came to the Colony was an extradition case in which the Chinese Government appeared. It was informed that it had been the practice in the Colony for some years, and in fact it was stated that the Colonial Government had been accustomed to stand aside allowing the Chinese Government to take charge. I held that the Chinese Government had no locus standi. The Full Court in a recent case however, had their attention called to what were looked on as precedents in the Courts at Home, in which Foreign Governments had appeared, and noting that my attention had not been called to them, allowed the Chinese Government to appear, but they refrained from giving a definite decision on the subject. I therefore allowed the Chinese Government to appear, and the case was conducted by its Counsel but I intimated that I considered that the matter was open for me to express a definite and considered opinion upon it. Now as to the so-called authorities, the point is an absolutely new one; the most that can be said is that a practice has grown up of allowing the foreign Government to appear, and that it has never been challenged, and therefore has never been considered by the Courts. In one case indeed, re Querin, the Banque de France, the complainants in France, were represented by Counsel. The practice seems to me to be entirely contrary to the fundamental ideas of extradition. The English extradition proceedings are in aid of the foreign criminal proceedings; they are instituted by the English Government at the request of the Foreign Government. On this mere statement of the case it appears to me clear that the foreign Government cannot have any voice in the matter—otherwise than diplomatic. It seems to me inconceivable that a foreign Government should first ask the English Government to act, and then contest that into a permission to conduct the proceedings. The letter and spirit of the Act are dead against it. If it had been thought advisable nothing would have been easier than to have made a different procedure; and to say that the requisition should take the form of a request to appear before the English Courts to conduct the case. But there seems to me to be many reasons why such a course has not been adopted. The main one is this, that the foreign criminal proceedings have dropped out entirely, except so far as any evidence which may have been taken in them is concerned. Currency is not given to the foreign warrant; a whole English procedure has been superimposed on the foreign proceedings; as auxiliary to it, and further, the question before the English Courts is a wholly one of English law; an arbitrary but convenient one, the reference of the facts to English criminal law, has been created; so that the questions before the Magistrate are essentially English from beginning to end. And on the habeas corpus question is whether according to the principles of English law, that is, the English law of personal liberty and the English rules of construction of Act and Treaty, the person has been unjustly deprived of his liberty. In these proceedings, directly a requisition has been presented and the Secretary of State's order to the Magistrate made thereon, the foreign proceedings dropping out, it is impossible to say that the foreign Government is the party aggrieved. For that there is any analogy between the position of the foreign Government and that of the complainant in an English criminal case. The English Bench is charged solely with the duty of ascertaining whether the English Government can comply with the request of the foreign Government. There is another and it appears to me very important reason against allowing the foreign Government to appear. Counsel for the Government asks their instructions from the Government, and must therefore put forward the official interpretation of the Act or Treaty. The Court will decide whether that view is right or wrong. But it is quite conceivable that a foreign Government may not at all like this official view, and if it were allowed to appear independently, we should get the requested Government arguing as to the duty of the requested Government—which seems to me impossible. This undoubtedly was the view of Lord Russell when he said in re Galloway:—"The Law Officers of the Government of the day have expressed the desire of the Government that this extradition shall take place." In two treaties only is the subject dealt with, those with Spain and Switzerland, and I agree that the articles do lend some colour to the argument that the foreign Government has a locus standi, because they provide that in cases "where it may be necessary" the Spanish or Swiss Governments are to be represented by the English Law Officers, and vice versa. I am not very clear what the words "in cases where it may be necessary" really mean; but judging by re Castillon where the Attorney-General appeared for the Crown, and the Solicitor-General "by arrangement" for the Swiss Government, it seems to me possible that where a case is of grave importance to the foreign Government, as that was an agreement as to the necessity for its appearance may be come to, to assist in the deliberations. But it is quite clear that appearance independent of the English Government is never contemplated. It must be understood that I am dealing solely with the procedure after requisition—and not with the application to the Magistrate for the summary warrant. This decision does not throw any practical difficulty in the way of extradition proceedings; for the foreign Government can work behind the scenes, get together its evidence, marshal its witnesses; only it does not have the conduct of the case. Further I limit myself to the English Courts. I refer to this because in some treaties, notably that with France, there are references in the French procedure article to the British Government, which might possibly bear the construction that the British Government appears before the French Courts. We are quite in the dark as to what the procedure in foreign Courts is. I am therefore of opinion that the Chinese Government has no locus standi.

A REBUTAL TO THE AFFAIRS.

CASE AT THE BANKRUPTCY COURT.

In the Bankruptcy Court this morning, before the Chief Justice, Sir Francis Pigott, the case was mentioned in which a petition was presented to the Court by R. F. Wally, of the Owl Grill Rooms.

The Official Receiver—I understood that Mr. Hett wishes to appear for the petitioner. He has been sent for, but hasn't turned up.

Mr. Golding—I appear for two judgment creditors and as neither the petitioner nor his solicitor is present, I ask that the application be struck out.

His Lordship—We must first hear what Mr. Hett has to say.

Mr. Hett at this point entered the Court-room and informed his Lordship that the matter had been before his Lordship before. A partnership action was pending between his client and another party and owing to a question of the amount of the claim, his Lordship directed that it should be transferred to the Summary Court. Some time before two judgments had been obtained against his client but out of the whole assets of the business the latter had nothing with which to pay the amounts of the judgments, and rather than go to jail, he filed a petition to protect himself as well as his estate. The two judgments amounted to $1,000 but his total indebtedness was $5,000, the bulk of the balance being in respect of costs due to his (Mr. Hett's) firm. His client would not be insolvent if the two actions by Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Golding were to be disposed of. He (Mr. Hett) was ready to agree to a composition with a view to avoiding the arrest of his client.

Mr. Golding—The petitioner is not insolvent at all. It's merely a device on my friend's part to establish priority of claim. The estate is already protected by Mr. Seth. I submit that these proceedings are quite unnecessary. That's my position I take up.

Mr. Hett—If Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Golding consent not to send my client to jail I'll withdraw the petition at once.

Mr. Golding—As far as my client is concerned I shall certainly do so.

Mr. Hett—I don't expect to recover my costs. Perhaps your Lordship would like to hear what Mr. Gardiner has to say.

Mr. Gardiner being sent for stated that he had no desire to send petitioner to jail. He represented certain creditors whose claims arose in Shanghai. One claim had been adjourned since the pending hearing of that petition. He was willing to let his personal claim stand over but with regard to his clients he was not in a position to say what their intentions might be.

Mr. Hett—I ask that the application be adjourned.

His Lordship—You must remember it's a vacation.

Mr. Hett—I can always ask for an interim order.

After further discussion, the application was adjourned in Chambers.

WINDING-UP OF AN ESTATE.

APPLICATION AT THE BANKRUPTCY COURT.

Before the Chief Justice, Sir Francis Pigott, in the Bankruptcy Court this morning, Mr. E. Davidson, of Messrs. Hastings and Hastings, applied for an administration order in the matter of Cheung Kim Shan, deceased.

Mr. Davidson said he appeared for the petitioner creditor for the winding-up of an insolvent estate. No notice of opposition was filed. The petition stated that the estate was indebted to Messrs. Palmer and Turner for work done and material supplied and there were no sufficient assets to meet the liabilities.

His Lordship—What form is the order to take?

Mr. Davidson—A Receiver Order.

The Official Receiver was appointed Receiver and the application was granted.

NEW S. AND A. LINER.

"ST. ALBANS" IN PORT.

The E and A. Company's new steamer St. Albans, which arrived from Japan to-day, is on her maiden trip to Australia. The vessel will enter the Australian trade, being due at Sydney during the month of October. Particulars have been received of the new liner, showing that she is a handsome, up-to-date steamer. The St. Albans was built at Belfast, Ireland, and does not possess the clipper bow of the Empire, Edith, and Albion, which were now so familiar at this port. A straight stem, and elliptical stern have been put in. Schooner rigged, she has poop and foremast and bridge decks, and over the latter a promenade deck shaded by a light boat deck being built on the cellular, or double bottom, system, with deep big keels, to minimize rolling. There is accommodation for 63 first saloon passengers, 35 second, and 150, third. The first saloon passengers are berthed in 27 double cabins, and 9 single ones on the upper and bridge decks. These cabins are large and airy, fitted with wardrobes, electric fans, lights, and bunks, etc.—and those on the upper deck with double lavatories. All cabins have ports, or square windows.

The first dining saloon is on the fore part of the upper deck, and is fitted to seat 68 at tables arranged for parties of 4, 6 and 8. The drawing and smoke rooms are on the promenade deck, both being fitted to ensure the greatest comfort. The second saloon passengers are berthed in large and comfortable cabins on the port side of the upper deck, amidships. These cabins are fitted with electric fans, lights, and bunks, etc., and ports are fitted in the ship's side for the upper and lower berths. The second dining saloon is on the after part of the deck, and the lounge and smoke rooms are on the after part of the bridge deck. Steerage passenger accommodation is in the poop, and on the tween decks forward in well-ventilated and most comfortable quarters. The steamer's engines are on the direct acting horizontal type, supplied with steam from four boilers of the cylindrical multitubular type, and maintain a speed of 300 miles daily, but more if necessary.

Wireless telegraphy is arranged for, and will be completed when stations are erected along the north coast of Australia. The vessel's carrying capacity is 4,750 tons dead weight, and cubical contents of 167,000 feet, 36,000 feet of which is insulated for the carriage of frozen meat, butter, etc., and 4,000 feet for fruit and vegetables. Ample insulated space has been arranged for ship's stores. The ammonia system of refrigeration is adopted, and being installed under the direct supervision of J. J. O'Brien, a large portable swimming bath is arranged on the upper deck, which will be much appreciated in the tropics.

When recently at Shanghai the public were invited to go over the vessel. After making an inspection of the vessel, the party were entertained to lunch on board. Mr. John Francis, a well-known speaker, proposed the health of the vessel, the health being suitably replied to by Captain Macdonald. The general impression formed by the guests was that the new vessel was a magnificent one, and that the new company was well equipped with any of the latest steamers of the E. and A. Co., a special feature being that all the second saloon accommodation has been placed in the poop. In all respects, the vessel marks an advance on any of the vessels now running in the trade between Australia, China and Japan.
